A night gone wrong.

Today you were served with a lawsuit. It states that several months ago, you sold two cases of beer to two young men. According to the lawsuit, the driver was underage and got into an accident. He harmed himself, his passenger, and the driver of the other vehicle. You don't recall the purchase and have procedures in place to verify the age of your customers.

Now someone is trying to hold you accountable for the accident, since you made the liquor sale.

Are you covered? How will your insurance company respond?

A name you can trust.
