

Delivery is often not covered.

Other companies may offer insurance for restaurants, but most will not knowingly cover a delivery exposure. Regardless of whether a delivery driver is an employee or an independent contractor, or whether he was truly driving in the course of a delivery when an accident occurs, it is the rare Plaintiff's attorney who won't sue the restaurant - and sometimes only the restaurant. A few seconds of distraction, a poor decision behind the wheel, or hazardous weather conditions could result in a serious accident with significant injuries.

You can count on the insurance experts at Illinois Casualty Company to provide a protection plan that's custom-tailored to your business. This includes effective loss control that may be the difference between a fender bender that results in a minor claim and a catastrophic accident that leads to a multi-million dollar lawsuit.

So why take a chance that you'll be kicked to the curb by your current insurance coverage? Trust your restaurant to the insurance specialists at Illinois Casualty Company.

Where do you turn now?

It is shaping up to be a busy Friday night and your main delivery driver called in sick. Your neighbor's teenage son is home from college and filled in at the last minute. He just called to tell you that he was involved in an accident at a busy intersection, and the other driver was placed in an ambulance. Your driver claims the accident was not his fault.
